

ENFJ

ENFJ is a social and charismatic personality type. They are often described as the "Protagonist" or "The Giver". They are highly empathetic and enjoy helping others. They are natural leaders and are often found in careers that involve people, such as counseling, teaching, or public relations. They are also very organized and like to have a plan for everything.

ENFJs are often very idealistic and have a strong sense of purpose. They are also very sensitive and can be easily hurt. They are often very loyal and devoted to their loved ones. They are also very good at listening and understanding others. They are often very good at resolving conflicts and are often seen as peacemakers.

ENFJs are often very good at motivating others and are often seen as the "heart" of a team. They are also very good at organizing and planning. They are often very good at public speaking and are often found in careers that involve public relations or marketing. They are also very good at understanding and helping others. They are often very good at resolving conflicts and are often seen as peacemakers.

ENFJs are often very good at understanding and helping others. They are often very good at resolving conflicts and are often seen as peacemakers. They are also very good at listening and understanding others. They are often very good at resolving conflicts and are often seen as peacemakers.

ENFJs are often very good at understanding and helping others. They are often very good at resolving conflicts and are often seen as peacemakers. They are also very good at listening and understanding others. They are often very good at resolving conflicts and are often seen as peacemakers.

ENFJs are often very good at understanding and helping others. They are often very good at resolving conflicts and are often seen as peacemakers. They are also very good at listening and understanding others. They are often very good at resolving conflicts and are often seen as peacemakers.

